A Seamless Cloud Migration Supports The Distributed Workforce at Currie Associates

A structured transition to a cloud-hosted environment keeps consulting teams connected across locations.

CLIENT: Curries Associates

INDUSTRY: Hazardous materials and dangerous goods consulting

LOCATION: Tyrone, Georgia

SERVICES: Compliance consulting, regulatory training, and association management support

Executive Summary

Currie Associates needed to modernize their technology while consolidating offices and supporting a distributed workforce. The organization relies heavily on computers to manage consulting projects, regulatory training, and association operations. After partnering with Alltek, Currie Associates moved to a cloud-hosted remote desktop environment that allowed staff to stay connected.

Challenges

- Legacy domain servers connected through VPN created complexity
- Office consolidation required a tight migration timeline
- Uncertainty about cloud adoption and potential downtime
- Need to support remote staff across multiple locations
- Their previous provider claimed key systems could not move to the cloud

Alltek's Approach

Alltek created a phased onboarding process that focused on learning workflows before migration. The team prepared backend infrastructure, trained employees in advance, and guided leadership through the transition.

Key Actions

- Onboarded Currie Associates as a managed support client before migration
- Deployed a cloud-hosted remote desktop environment
- Synchronized files using Microsoft tools for consistent access
- Prepared QuickBooks and Access databases ahead of cutover
- Delivered training and extra support

Solutions

- Centralized cloud workspace for remote collaboration
- Synchronized file access between local devices and hosted systems
- Structured onboarding that prioritized employee confidence
- IT helpdesk support with consistent communication and ticket visibility

Results

- Office consolidation completed on schedule without downtime
- Employees maintained access to projects and files throughout the transition
- Remote staff connected successfully from multiple regions
- Leadership gained confidence in cloud adoption after a smooth onboarding experience

"All of my worries went away as soon as we did the transition. Alltek IT support was right on top of everything."
